Questions relating to information

Letter dated 6 June 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Argentina to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

I have the honour to write to you on behalf of the Group of Friends of Spanish at the United Nations to convey our recognition of the efforts made by the Department of Public Information to strengthen multilingualism and, in that context, to promote the necessary linguistic parity among the six official languages of the United Nations.

We particularly appreciate the report which the Department compiled at the request of the Group of Friends concerning statistics on the use of official languages on the websites and social networks of the Organization (see annex*).

We believe that the valuable information contained therein will undoubtedly help to improve follow-up of the evolving use of the United Nations website, formulate joint actions and advance the work of the Department. I should therefore be grateful if you would have the present letter and its annex circulated as a document of the General Assembly under agenda item 55, "Questions relating to information", given that it cannot at this stage be circulated under the agenda item "Multilingualism", which is currently considered biennially.

Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, questions relating to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and humanitarian questions

Letter dated 26 June 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Turkmenistan to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

I have the honour to transmit herewith the statement of the Co-Chairs of the International Conference on Migration and Statelessness: Identifying Challenges and the Way Forward, which was held in Ashgabat on 23 and 24 June 2014 (see annex).

The Conference, which was hosted by the Government of Turkmenistan and co-organized by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the International Organization for Migration, identified best practices for addressing situations of statelessness and for improving the management of migration in Central Asia and globally.

The Forum focused on identifying practical measures to realize the agendas for migration and statelessness set out in the 2013 High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development and the 2009 Regional Conference on Prevention and Reduction of Statelessness and the Protection of Stateless Persons in Central Asia.

Migration is a key global issue, with the number of international migrants reaching an unprecedented 232 million in 2013 and projected to rise to 405 million by 2050. Central Asia is a major migration crossroads, and regional economies and societies are strongly affected by human mobility.

Turkmenistan has achieved considerable progress with regard to the reduction and prevention of statelessness. In the period of 2011-2013, Turkmenistan granted citizenship to almost 4,000 stateless people. On the eve of the Conference, 786 stateless persons were granted Turkmen citizenship by the decree of the President.

In 2014, the international community marks the sixtieth anniversary of the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons. In that regard, UNHCR is launching a global campaign in September 2014 aimed at the elimination of statelessness within the next decade.

The outcome of the International Conference on Migration and Statelessness is one of the valuable contributions to international efforts to tackle pressing challenges in the areas of migration and statelessness.

I would be very grateful if you would circulate the present letter and its annex as a document of the sixty-eighth session of the General Assembly, under agenda item 62.

Annex to the letter dated 26 June 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Turkmenistan to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

Statement by the Co-Chairs of the International Conference on Migration and Statelessness: Identifying challenges and the way forward (23 and 24 June 2014, Ashgabat)

The International Conference on Migration and Statelessness, which took place in Ashgabat, Turkmenistan, on 23 and 24 June 2014, was hosted by the Government of Turkmenistan and organized jointly by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in order to discuss key regional challenges in the two spheres, migration and statelessness, that had been identified as meriting further exploration and to propose the way forward in addressing them. The Conference built on the outcomes of previous discussions of these issues, notably the 2013 High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development and the 2009 Regional Conference on Prevention and Reduction of Statelessness and Protection of Stateless Persons in Central Asia.

On migration, the Conference:

Highlights the importance of the United Nations General Assembly High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development in advancing inter-State dialogue and cooperation on migration issues and also the significant progress in addressing migration as a global phenomenon made at the second High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development, which was held in October 2013;

Reaffirms their commitment to the provisions of the Declaration of the High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development, adopted in General Assembly resolution 68/4 on 3 October 2013, and the need to ensure its implementation;

Notes the convergence of views regarding the global significance of international migration for the development of countries of origin, transit and destination, the critical links between international migration and the economic, social and environmental aspects of development at the national, regional and international levels, and the relevance of migration for the post-2015 development agenda;

Acknowledges both positive and negative impacts of migration on development, recognizing that migration and migrants can contribute to inclusive and sustainable social and economic development, and to enhanced resilience and improved disaster preparedness in the face of climate change and environmental degradation, while noting that migration can also create new vulnerabilities and inequalities if poorly managed;

Notes the need to continue strengthening synergies between international migration and development. The following relevant measures were mentioned: ensuring that migration is adequately considered in the post-2015 development agenda by, inter alia, its inclusion in the goal of a new partnership for development, and also by factoring migration into local, national and regional development strategies, poverty reduction strategies, health, labour and other sectoral policies and plans; and more systematically establishing synergies with related policy instruments, such as those for disaster risk reduction and climate change adaptation;

Reaffirms the need to continue efforts towards devising and implementing comprehensive migration management policies with full respect for human rights norms and obligations at the national, regional and international levels. Effective and comprehensive migration management and cooperation among countries of origin, transit and destination, and also with non-governmental stakeholders, were identified as necessary for ensuring orderly mobility with full respect for the human rights of all migrants and for addressing the challenges and realizing the opportunities of migration for development;

Recognizes the need to continue strengthening inter-State cooperation as well as cooperation with relevant non-State actors in addressing irregular migration, combating trafficking in persons and migrant smuggling, and protecting trafficked persons, in order to enhance public perceptions of migrants, provide assistance and support to migrants caught in crisis situations, improve the health of migrants and ensure safe and orderly migration with full respect for the human rights of migrants;

Acknowledges the importance of protecting the human rights of all migrants and their families both as an end in itself, and as a condition for harnessing the benefits of migration for migrants and societies. Accordingly, the commitment to universally recognized principles and norms of international law and the obligations of States under international treaties in the field of migration was reaffirmed. The readiness to continue undertaking efforts to enhance the protection of the human rights of all migrants and their families was noted. In this context, particular attention was drawn to the needs of vulnerable groups, such as children, youth and women, as well as migrants caught in crisis situations, to the strengthening of measures to eliminate migrant exploitation, including human trafficking, and also to manifestations and expressions of racism, discrimination and xenophobia and to negative public perceptions of migrants and migration;

Acknowledges the importance of the human mobility dimension of humanitarian crises, and the need to consistently factor it into the policies and measures aimed at crisis preparedness, response and measures to address the medium to long-term consequences of crises for individuals and States;

Recognizes that some groups of migrants experience increased health risks, and that improved migrant health would have benefits for migrants and their families, public health outcomes in countries of origin and destination and the overall positive development outcomes of migration. In this regard, the participants noted the need for strategies and policies to address migrants' health which would be sensitive to the specific health needs of women, men and children, and include promotion of migrant-sensitive health policies and equitable access to health services for migrants, subject to national laws and practice, without discrimination on the basis of gender, age, religion, nationality or race;

Welcomes the active efforts of Turkmenistan to develop cooperation with IOM. A vivid example of sustained partnership in this area is the accession of Turkmenistan to IOM, which was followed by the systematization of plans adopted jointly with IOM;

Welcomes the readiness of Turkmenistan to support the practical implementation of the outcomes of this Conference by proposing and initiating the relevant IOM resolution.

On statelessness, the Conference:

Recalls the global mandate of UNHCR and appreciate its efforts to increase awareness of and to resolve statelessness issues. It was further noted that 2014 marks the sixtieth anniversary of the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons. In this context, UNHCR is launching a global campaign to end statelessness by 2024;

Notes that statelessness remains a major challenge in the twenty-first century across the globe. The global population affected is estimated to be at least 10 million people and the vast majority are in protracted situations of statelessness. Statelessness can result from State succession, nationality laws which discriminate on the basis of gender or ethnicity, arbitrary deprivation of nationality, conflict of laws, gaps in nationality laws which create statelessness at birth or later in life, and from administrative obstacles to the acquisition of identity and nationality documents;

Highlights that the participants described some key common challenges facing States in terms of statelessness across the region and beyond. In Central Asia, statelessness most frequently affects persons who did not acquire any nationality following the break-up of the Soviet Union, many of whom hold expired Soviet passports, and some stateless persons who arrived to the Central Asia region after 1991 from other countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States. Problems related to citizenship status and new cases of statelessness also continue to arise as a result of migration, for example owing to provisions for loss of nationality as a result of residency outside the country of nationality. New situations of statelessness have also arisen on account of requirements for lawful entry and departure and residence registration;

Notes that, at the global level, many States have already adopted effective strategies to reduce statelessness. Good examples of global best practices include nationality law reform in Côte d'Ivoire in 2013 to allow stateless people with deep roots in the country to acquire nationality through a simple declaration procedure, providing a potential solution for hundreds of thousands of stateless people. In the Russian Federation, some 600,000 stateless people are reported to have acquired nationality between 2002 and 2009 through a simplified naturalization procedure. In Brazil and Indonesia, the grant of citizenship to people left stateless by nationality laws in force in previous decades has been complemented by legislative reforms to prevent new cases of statelessness;

Recalls that the Regional Conference on Prevention and Reduction of Statelessness and the Protection of Stateless Persons in Central Asia was held in Ashgabat in 2009, following which the States in the region have taken a number of steps to reduce and prevent statelessness, including identification and registration of stateless persons and persons with undetermined nationality, reform of nationality legislation, as well as the grant and confirmation of nationality and issuance of nationality documents;

Notes tne significant progress made by the host Government, Turkmenistan, in addressing and resolving situations of statelessness. In 2011, Turkmenistan became the first country in the region to become party to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and in 2012, to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness. Following the accession, Turkmenistan also adopted a new law on citizenship. In 2011, a drive to register individuals with undetermined nationality was carried out by the State Migration Service with the support of UNHCR. The aim of the registration was to issue the persons with Turkmen nationality documents. As a result, between 2011 and 2014, close to 5,000 individuals were granted Turkmen citizenship through Presidential Decrees;

Commends the efforts being made by Kyrgyzstan. Kyrgyzstan adopted a new Citizenship Law in 2007, which recognizes as nationals all stateless former Soviet citizens who have resided in the country for more than five years. New regulations on citizenship procedures were also adopted. Since 2009, more than 65,000 former Soviet citizens have been issued with citizenship documents. This year, Kyrgyzstan has embarked on a further identification and documentation campaign for undocumented persons, with the ultimate goal of eliminating statelessness in Kyrgyzstan by 2016;

Reaffirms that reforms of nationality laws, policies and administrative practices are vital in resolving situations of statelessness and preventing new situations from arising. Examples of reforms to resolve existing situations include the establishment of simplified procedures for confirmation of nationality and issuance of nationality documents as well as facilitated acquisition of nationality for persons who are identified as stateless. Nationality laws that do not discriminate on the basis of gender or ethnicity and which include a safeguard ensuring that children are not born stateless, were mentioned as good examples of means to prevent statelessness through legislation;

Notes that further actions are required to ensure that stateless persons can enjoy their fundamental human rights, such as freedom from arbitrary detention and access to education and health care, including through grant of legal stay and issuance of identity documents reflecting their status as a stateless person;

Calls upon States and international organizations for further actions to address and resolve situations of statelessness. It was noted that, as a first step, mechanisms for identification of stateless persons often need to be improved, including through population census, surveys and registration campaigns. Establishment of formal statelessness status determination procedures was recognized as an important means of identification of statelessness in a migratory context. There was also broad recognition of the further need to explore multilateral and bilateral agreements among States to facilitate the sharing of information relating to applications for statelessness status and nationality determination;

Recognizes that the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness constitute the backbone of the international legal response to statelessness. The adoption of measures leading to accession to these Conventions by States that are not yet parties was highlighted as an important element of effectively addressing statelessness.

Finally, the Conference expresses support for cooperation mechanisms and partnerships among States and with other stakeholders, including United Nations agencies, regional organizations and civil society, in order to better prevent and reduce situations of statelessness and to protect stateless persons.

The Conference recommends that:

The outcomes of this conference should be addressed at other relevant regional and global forums on migration and on statelessness, such as the First Global Forum on Statelessness, which will be held in the Hague in September 2014, and the Global Forum on Migration and Development, which will take place in Istanbul in 2015, and also in the course of the regular annual meetings of IOM and UNHCR in Geneva, and should also be reflected in any decisions made at these meetings.

Sixty-ninth year

Letter dated 2 July 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Armenia to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

Upon the instructions of my Government, I am writing to draw your attention to the ongoing violations of the ceasefire by the armed forces of the Republic of Azerbaijan recorded for the month of June 2014 (see annex).

I would also like to emphasize the fact that irresponsible military activities by the Azerbaijani side during the reporting period resulted in the death of four soldiers: Andranik Eghoyan and Boris Gasparyan, killed on 5 June; Narek Poghosyan, killed on 19 June; and Armen Avetisyan, killed on 24 June.

Armenia strongly condemns these continued provocations and the use of force by Azerbaijan.

I kindly request that the present letter and its annex be circulated as a document of the General Assembly, under agenda item 33, and of the Security Council.

General Assembly
Sixty-eighth session
Agenda item 33
Prevention of armed conflict

Security Council
Sixty-ninth year

Letter dated 30 June 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Armenia to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

Upon the instructions of my Government, I am writing to draw your attention to the ongoing violations of the ceasefire by the armed forces of the Republic of Azerbaijan recorded for the month of May 2014 (see annex).

I would also like to emphasize the fact that irresponsible military activities by the Azerbaijani side during the reporting period resulted in the death of three soldiers: Artur Ohanjanyan, killed on 20 May; Garik Balayan, killed on 26 May; and Erik Gasparyan, killed on 28 May.

Armenia strongly condemns these continued provocations and the use of force by Azerbaijan.

I kindly request that the present letter and its annex be circulated as a document of the General Assembly, under agenda item 33, and of the Security Council.

(Signed) Zohrab Mnatsakanyan

General Assembly
Sixty-eighth session
Agenda items 34 and 38

Security Council
Sixty-ninth year

Protracted conflicts in the GUAM area and their implications for international peace, security and development

The situation in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan

Letter dated 2 July 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Azerbaijan to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

In accordance with instructions received from the Government of the Republic of Azerbaijan, I have the honour to draw your attention to ongoing violations of the ceasefire by the Republic of Armenia recorded for June 2014 (see annex). During this period, the armed forces of the Republic of Armenia continued to intensively fire from their positions in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan and from the territory of Armenia at the positions of the armed forces of Azerbaijan, as well as at populated areas and civilian objects situated in the vicinity of the front line. As a result, two servicemen of the armed forces of Azerbaijan, Zaur Hesenli and Samandar Karimov, were killed, and one serviceman and two civilians were wounded.

I would like to reiterate my country's strongest condemnation of the incessant attempts by Armenia to escalate the situation along the front line and its cowardly attacks on populated areas and civilian targets. Azerbaijan will continue to take resolute measures against and respond adequately to Armenia's ongoing aggression, violations of the ceasefire and other provocative acts.

I should be grateful if you would have the present letter and its annex circulated as a document of the General Assembly, under agenda items 34 and 38, and of the Security Council.

Open meeting of the Group of Friends of Security Sector Reform: implementation of Security Council resolution 2151 (2014) — Security sector reform and the maintenance of international peace and security

Draft statement of the Co-Chairs

The Group of Friends of Security Sector Reform gathered on 17 June 2014 for a meeting at United Nations Headquarters in New York. The meeting was co-chaired by the Permanent Representative of the Slovak Republic to the United Nations, Frantisek Ružička, and the Permanent Representative of South Africa to the United Nations, Jeremiah Nyamane Kingsley Mamabolo (represented by Mlungisi Cedrick Mbalati).

Speakers at the event included the Permanent Representative of Nigeria to the United Nations, U. Joy Ogwu; the Permanent Representative of the Netherlands to the United Nations, Karel J. G. van Oosterom; the Assistant Secretary-General for the Rule of Law and Security Institutions in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, Dmitry Titov; the Deputy Director of the Bureau for Policy and Programme Support, United Nations Development Programme, Stan Nkwain; and the focal point on security sector reform within the Economic Community of West African States, Isaac Armstrong. Security sector reform chiefs and advisers from United Nations peacekeeping and special political missions also participated in the meeting.

The Secretary-General's call in his second report on security sector reform for the Group to "continue to be engaged and to facilitate strategic discussions on strengthening the United Nations approach in this critical area" (A/67/970-S/2013/480, para. 61 (m)) was recognized. Members of the Group reiterated their commitment to the development of a comprehensive and holistic United Nations approach to security sector reform.

Attention was drawn to and support was expressed for the following positions recently set out in Security Council resolution 2151 (2014):

First, security sector reform is "a key element of peacekeeping and special political mission mandates". An effective and accountable security sector is "the cornerstone of peace and sustainable development".

Second, security sector reform "should be a nationally owned process that is rooted in the particular needs and conditions of the country in question", and it is important to consider "the perspectives of the host countries in the formulation of relevant mandates".

Third, "security sector reform constitutes a key element of the political processes of States recovering from conflict and of the strengthening of the rule of law institutions".

Fourth, in addition to reform of the individual components of the security sector, it is important to strengthen "support for sector-wide initiatives that aim to enhance the governance and overall performance of the security sector and address the foundations upon which security institutions in each component area are built".

Fifth, the Secretary-General should "encourage the Secretary-General's Special Representatives and Envoys to fully take into account the strategic value of security sector reform in their work, including through their good offices".

During the meeting, the members of the Group also voiced their support for calls to strengthen United Nations capacity to support national security sector reform efforts, both in the field and at United Nations Headquarters, as outlined in Security Council resolution 2151 (2014), reports of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping (A/64/19, A/65/19, A/68/19) and the second report of the Secretary-General on security sector reform (A/67/970-S/2013/480).

In accordance with resolution 2151 (2014), members of the Group of Friends reiterated the need to:

- Make it a priority to "assist relevant senior United Nations management to understand how to deliver mandated security sector reform tasks", while also including all staff involved in supporting national security sector reform efforts
- "Encourage the Secretary-General's Special Representatives and Envoys to fully take into account the strategic value of security sector reform in their work, including through their good offices, where mandated", and identify metrics within their compacts to hold them accountable in this respect
- Urge "integration as regards sector-wide and component levels of UN support both at headquarters and in the field"; and in this respect, reiterate to Special Representatives of the Secretary-General the potential for integrating SSR components in the field, specifically by ensuring the development of integrated security sector analyses, security sector support plans (including training, equipment and governance-related dimensions) and mission-wide assessments
- Strengthen "support for sector-wide initiatives that aim to enhance the governance and overall performance of the security sector and address the foundations upon which security institutions in each component area are built"
- Enhance as part of overall security sector reform the delivery of peacekeeping operations in the areas of national security sector governance, police sector reform, defence sector reform and border management and security reform, as well as enhance support to the reform of police services and defence forces, and expand assistance to institutions responsible for their oversight and management
- "Work closely with regional and subregional organizations to support the development of security sector reform frameworks" and deepen and expand thematic and regional partnerships, particularly in new practice areas, such as "security sector public financial management" (see A/67/970-S/2013/480, para. 61 (l) and (h))
- "Strengthen the monitoring and evaluation of United Nations security sector reform initiatives", particularly in the contexts of mission transition and reporting on Security Council benchmarks

- "Provide financial and technical resources to enable the deployment of expertise" (see A/67/970-S/2013/480, para. 61 (n)) from the United Nations roster of security sector reform experts, thereby enhancing the Organization's capacity to rapidly deploy security sector reform expertise
- Enhance the capacities of the Inter-agency Security Sector Reform Task Force and the Security Sector Reform Unit in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations to enable them to meet their operational mandate, particularly with respect to enhanced delivery of field support, and to play their mandated role in promoting an effective, coherent and well-coordinated approach in this crucial area (see A/67/970-S/2013/480, para. 61 (o)).

The way forward

The Security Council's call for Member States to "provide voluntary support to security sector reform efforts, including at a sector-wide level, in accordance with the priorities set forth by national authorities" (resolution 2151 (2014)) was reiterated. It was noted that despite the remarkable progress, key security sector reform mechanisms — particularly the Inter-agency Security Sector Reform Task Force and the Security Sector Reform Unit — do not have a direct resource allocation and have an inadequate resource allocation, respectively. Therefore, it is crucial to make efforts to better explore the use of existing resources as well as the allocation of additional resources, such as assessed budgets.

Annex to the letter dated 3 July 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Viet Nam to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

The sovereignty of Viet Nam over the Hoang Sa Archipelago

The Socialist Republic of Viet Nam rejects as completely unfounded, in fact and in law, China's sovereignty claims over the Hoang Sa Archipelago (which China calls "the Xisha Islands", also known as the Paracel Islands) in the annexes to the letters dated 22 May 2014 (A/68/887) and 9 June 2014 (A/68/907) from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of China to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General. Viet Nam affirms that the Chinese claims have no legal or historical foundation.

Historical documents are not in accord with China's claims of sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago (Paracel Islands).

China has, in its recent communications, referred to some documents as historical evidence to assert the so-called "sovereignty" of China over the Hoang Sa Archipelago of Viet Nam. However, these "documents" cannot be authenticated, lack accuracy and have been interpreted by China in an arbitrary fashion. The documents referred to by China do not by any means prove that China established sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago when this territory was terra nullius. Historical records, by contrast, show that China understood that its sovereignty did not extend to the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

For example, in the last decade of the nineteenth century, when the ships Bellona and Umeji Maru sank in the Hoang Sa Archipelago and were looted by Chinese fishermen, the Chinese authorities of Guangdong Province of China argued that the Hoang Sa Archipelago were abandoned islands that did not belong to China. The Archipelago was neither administratively attached to any district of Hainan Island of China nor did it fall under the responsibility of any Chinese authority. China, on these grounds, refused to take responsibility for the incident.

In contrast, Viet Nam has publicly provided authentic historical materials proving that Viet Nam established its sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago when the islands were terra nullius. Since at least the seventeenth century, the Nguyen dynasties of Viet Nam had organized activities to exploit resources on islands of the Hoang Sa Archipelago and had undertaken maritime measurements and recorded navigation routes to ensure the safety of navigation by foreign vessels through the waters of the Hoang Sa Archipelago. These activities were well recorded in official documents issued by the Vietnamese dynasties of the time. Said documents are still archived in Viet Nam.

After France and Viet Nam had signed the protectorate treaties of 15 March 1874 and 6 June 1884 respectively, France, on behalf of Viet Nam, continuously exercised Viet Nam's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago and protested against China's infringements. France conducted many activities to exercise sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago, including building and operating lighthouses and meteorological stations, establishing administrative delegations attached to Thua Thien province (Annam) that were responsible for the Archipelago, and granting birth certificates to Vietnamese citizens born in the Archipelago. In 1909, an exploratory mission conducted by Commander Li Zhun out of Guangdong Province of China violated the sovereignty that had been well established by Viet Nam over the Hoang Sa Archipelago and effectively exercised by France on behalf of Viet Nam. France, on behalf of Viet Nam, protested against China's intrusions upon the Hoang Sa Archipelago and reaffirmed that sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago had been well established by Viet Nam. In response to China's claims over the Hoang Sa Archipelago, France requested that China consent to resolving the issue through international arbitration (note verbale dated 18 February 1937 from France to China), but China refused.

In 1946, the Republic of China under Chiang Kai-shek, taking advantage of the situation at the end of the Second World War, illegally intruded upon Phu Lam (Woody) Island of the Hoang Sa Archipelago. In 1947, France protested against this illegal intrusion and requested that the two parties negotiate and settle the issue through third-party adjudication, which the Republic of China again refused. The Chiang Kai-shek regime later withdrew from Woody Island.

International conferences did not transfer the Hoang Sa Archipelago to China.

Before and after the end of the Second World War, the issue of sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago was put on the agenda of a number of international conferences. The Cairo Conference, convened from 22 to 26 November 1943, with United States President Franklin D. Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Republic of China President Chiang Kai-shek in attendance, adopted the Cairo Communiqué, which aimed at eliminating Japanese administration over all Asia-Pacific islands seized by Japan since the First World War in 1914 and returning to China Chinese territories under Japanese occupation, including Manju, Taiwan and Penghu. Chiang Kai-shek, who represented China at the Conference, said nothing about the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

The Potsdam Conference, convened from 17 July to 2 August 1945, with the leaders of the United States, the United Kingdom and China in attendance, issued the Potsdam Declaration, which reaffirmed the Cairo Communiqué. Chiang Kai-shek, the representative of China at the Conference, again made no mention whatsoever of the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes.

The San Francisco peace conference, convened from 4 to 8 September 1951, was attended by representatives of 51 countries, including Viet Nam as a member of the French Union. The Prime Minister of the State of Viet Nam, Tran Van Huu, participated in the conference as Head of the Vietnamese delegation. The conference addressed the issue of the devolution of a number of territories in the Asia-Pacific region. At the conference, the Head of delegation of the Soviet Union, Andrei A. Gromyko, put forth a proposal on behalf of China containing 13 items, among which was Japan's recognition of the sovereignty of the People's Republic of China over some islands in the East Sea (South China Sea), including the Hoang Sa Archipelago. With 46 votes against, 3 votes in favour and 2 abstentions, the conference rejected the proposal by the delegation of the Soviet Union.

Immediately after that vote, on 7 September 1951, while addressing the conference, the Head of the Vietnamese delegation, Tran Van Huu, reaffirmed Viet Nam's long-standing sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes. None of the 51 participating countries protested against the Vietnamese delegation's confirmation of its sovereignty over those archipelagoes.

The Geneva Conference of 1954 on the problem of restoring peace in Indo-China stated that the parties concerned would respect the independence and territorial integrity of Viet Nam, which included the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes then under the administration of French and Vietnamese forces. Having been a participant at the Geneva Conference, China is well aware of this fact and must respect the international instruments adopted at the Conference.

Article 1 of the Paris Accords of 1973 clearly stated that all countries must respect the independence and territorial integrity of Viet Nam. At that time, the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes were under the administration of the Republic of Viet Nam and constituted an integral part of Vietnamese territory.

In January 1974, China used military force to occupy the entire Hoang Sa Archipelago. The Government of the Republic of Viet Nam and the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Viet Nam issued statements to express their positions and to protest China's action. The Government of the Republic of Viet Nam requested that the United Nations Security Council hold an urgent meeting on China's use of force. Under the international law of territorial acquisition, the use of force to occupy a territory cannot create territorial title.

China violated the principle of refraining from the threat or use of force under international law and therefore could not establish sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

China illegally invaded the Hoang Sa Archipelago twice. Taking advantage of France's withdrawal from Viet Nam, in 1956 China invaded and occupied the eastern part of the Hoang Sa Archipelago. This was the first-ever standing occupation of China anywhere in the Hoang Sa Archipelago, which elicited strong protests from the Republic of Viet Nam. In 1959, an attempt by Chinese soldiers disguised as fishermen to land on the western part of the Archipelago was smashed by the forces of the Republic of Viet Nam. Eighty-two Chinese "fishermen" were captured. Both invasions occurred after the sovereignty of Viet Nam over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes had been reaffirmed, without any protest, at the above-mentioned international conferences. In 1974, taking advantage of the war in Viet Nam, China attacked and seized control over the Hoang Sa Archipelago from the Government of the Republic of Viet Nam. This was the first time that China had fully occupied the Hoang Sa Archipelago by force.

Under international law, the use of force to occupy the territory of another sovereign state is null and void and can never be the basis for a claim of sovereignty. Viet Nam's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago therefore continues and is not displaced by China's occupation by force.

In a memorandum dated 12 May 1988, an official document of the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs, China also clearly asserted the principle of international law that "aggression cannot award sovereignty" over a territory. No country in the world recognizes China's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

Viet Nam has never recognized China's sovereignty over the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

China has deliberately distorted and misinterpreted history when it refers to the letter signed by late Prime Minister Pham Van Dong in 1958 and other materials and publications published in Viet Nam before 1975 in an attempt to support its claims over the Hoang Sa Archipelago. The letter made no mention at all of sovereignty over the Hoang Sa and Truong Sa Archipelagoes. The letter concerned maritime entitlements, not territorial issues. In fact, the conclusions that China would draw today from the letter are contradicted by China's own statements, including statements by Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping himself.

In September 1975, 17 years after the release of the letter by the late Prime Minister Pham Van Dong, Chinese Leader Deng Xiaoping told Vietnamese Leader Le Duan in Beijing that "China has sufficient materials to prove that the Xisha Islands (Hoang Sa) and Nansha Islands (Truong Sa) have been part of China's territory since long ago. However, in line with the principle of friendly consultation to resolve differences, the two countries will discuss with each other to address this issue later". Deng Xiaoping's statement was well noted in a Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs memorandum dated 12 May 1988 and reflects China's understanding that sovereignty was not settled in favour of China by any previous statement or agreement. Viet Nam requests that China respect this historical fact and seriously engage in negotiations with Viet Nam in respect of the Hoang Sa Archipelago.

Annex to the letter dated 3 July 2014 from the Permanent Representative of Viet Nam to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

China's illegal placement of the Haiyang Shiyou 981 oil rig in the exclusive economic zone and continental shelf of Viet Nam

The Socialist Republic of Viet Nam rejects as completely unfounded, in fact and in law, China's assertions in the annexes to the letters dated 22 May 2014 (A/68/887) and 9 June 2014 (A/68/907), from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of China to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General. Viet Nam reiterates the following:

I. Tensions escalate in East Sea (South China Sea) as result of China's activities in violation of international law

It is first of all necessary to state that the sovereignty dispute over the Hoang Sa Archipelago has long existed. This dispute, however, is not the cause of the ongoing escalating tension in the East Sea, which is to be addressed by applying the rules and procedures provided for in the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. The current tension is caused by China's illegal placement of the Haiyang Shiyou 981 oil rig within the exclusive economic zone and continental shelf of Viet Nam, over which Viet Nam is entitled to the rights of a coastal State in accordance with the Convention.

On 2 May 2014, China moved the Haiyang Shiyou 981 oil rig into the East Sea to conduct exploratory drilling, placing it at 15-29.58N/111-12.06E. On 27 May 2014, the rig was moved to 15-33.38N/111-34.62E. Both of these locations lie deep inside the exclusive economic zone and continental shelf of Viet Nam, approximately 130-150 nautical miles off the Vietnamese coast. China's activities infringe upon Viet Nam's sovereign rights and jurisdiction under the Convention and violate the high-level agreements between the two countries on non-aggravation and non-complication of the situation in the East Sea.

Viet Nam has consistently and resolutely protested China's activities that violate Viet Nam's sovereign rights and jurisdiction over its exclusive economic zone and continental shelf. Since 2005, Chinese ships, on a number of occasions, have intruded into the exclusive economic zone and continental shelf of Viet Nam and have conducted 2-D and 3-D seismic surveys in areas near the current locations of the Haiyang Shiyou 981 oil rig. In response to such intrusions, Viet Nam has sent civilian law enforcement vessels to the area in order to give warning and to demand that those Chinese ships stop their illegal activities. At the same time, through diplomatic channels, Viet Nam has engaged in repeated communications with and sent notes verbales to China, resolutely protesting China's wrongful acts, including a series of communications between Viet Nam's deputy foreign ministers and China's ambassadors in Hanoi. On 5 August 2010 and 8 August 2011, the spokesperson of Viet Nam's Ministry of Foreign Affairs publicly protested and requested that China immediately cease and desist from repeating the violations of Viet Nam's sovereign rights and jurisdiction in the East Sea. Since 2 May 2014, Viet Nam has sent notes verbales and communicated with the Chinese authorities at various levels more than 30 times to protest China's deployment of the oil rig and dispatching of escort vessels inside Viet Nam's maritime zones, acts which infringe upon Viet Nam's sovereign rights and jurisdiction. In these communications, Viet Nam has time and again demanded that China withdraw its oil rig and vessels from Vietnamese waters.

To abet the illegal operation of the Haiyang Shiyou 981 oil rig, China has deployed over 100 escort vessels, including military ships, in Viet Nam's maritime zones. China's coast guard ships have intentionally rammed Viet Nam's civilian law enforcement vessels. Numerous videos and photographs taken by international reporters on the scene at the invitation of Viet Nam vividly demonstrate China's violent and aggressive conduct, such as ramming into and firing water cannons at Vietnamese vessels, causing injuries to dozens of officers and damage to vessels of Viet Nam's civilian law enforcement agencies; and ramming and sinking one Vietnamese fishing boat on 26 May 2014 in total disregard for the safety and life of the Vietnamese fishermen on board. These activities by China have not only violated the prohibition against the threat or use of force under international law but have also constituted inhumane conduct against fellow seafarers.

2. Viet Nam's efforts and goodwill to settle current tension through dialogue and other peaceful means repeatedly rejected by China

Since the very beginning of the current tensions in early May 2014, Viet Nam has made every effort to communicate and conduct dialogue with China, under various forms and at various levels, to demand that China immediately stop all infringements upon Viet Nam's sovereign rights and jurisdiction, and withdraw its oil rig and vessels from Viet Nam's maritime zones, with a view to creating favourable conditions for a prompt opening of discussions between the two countries, on measures to stabilize the situation and to manage maritime issues between the two countries, pursuant to the Charter of the United Nations, the relevant provisions of the Convention, the Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea and other agreements between the two countries. Viet Nam has made more than 30 diplomatic communications with relevant Chinese authorities, the latest being the meeting between the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of Viet Nam, Pham Binh Minh, and the State Councillor of China, Yang Jiechi, in Hanoi on 18 June 2014. But China, to date, has consistently refused to withdraw the Haiyang Shiyou 981 oil rig; and it has not entered into substantive negotiations on the legality of its actions.

China must respect Viet Nam's rights as enshrined under the Convention. Once again, Viet Nam demands that China comply with international law and, to this end, immediately stop all infringements upon Viet Nam's sovereign rights and jurisdiction. In particular, Viet Nam demands that China withdraw the Haiyang Shiyou 981 oil rig, all ships and other related vehicles and equipment from Viet Nam's waters, and desist from intruding into Viet Nam's waters in the future. Viet Nam solemnly requests that China resolve all disputes through peaceful means in conformity with international law, including the Convention, to avoid the prolongation of tension and to refrain from actions that may trigger conflicts between the two countries.
